Steve:

Yes, there have not been formal changes/amendments made to the MOA since it was created in the 80's- it may have little bearing on your work but I will note we are working with DOGGR to clarify which formations listed in the attachments have been considered "exempt" aquifers since the state received primacy for the Class II program in 1983.

Best,

Alexa

Alexa,

Thank you for your time today. I will note per our discussion that no changes have occurred to the MOA between the State of California, Division of Oil & Gas, and US EPA since its inception in 1982.
